Forecast for Tuesday 20 Jun 2023

Weather: Some early brighter or sunny spells possible, however cloud will soon thicken from the south, with outbreaks of rain spreading north. These could be heavy at times, and the odd thundery burst cannot be ruled out. Rain clearing late afternoon and evening, perhaps with the odd brighter spell later.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 600m: 90%, falling to 40% during the afternoon. Lifting again to above 90% during the evening.

Low Cloud and visibility: Cloud thickening and descending to obscure hills above 500m during the afternoon. This breaking and clearing north later in the day, with cloud rising largely above the tops. Views will be good at first, but falling to moderate to poor in the rain and heavy showers. Improving good to very good in later drier intervals.
